

GENEALOGY OF FAMILY ŽARKOVIĆ

Žarko Mrkšić, from which the whole clan was named, is a son of Mrkša Mrkšić.

Mrkša Mrkšić was a nobleman and rector at the time of Emperor Dušan, as the legend says, in the area which today covers city Kosjerić with its surroundings. Except Žarko, he also had a son Petar, but we do not have precise information about his family tree.

Žarko, son of Mrkša Mrkšić, was married to Teodora Dejanović, niece of Emperor Dušan. He was the guardian of the Zeta and the guardian of the imperial seal of the Emperor Dušan, and later of emperor Uroš. They had a son and they gave him a name Mrkša. Žarko was killed when Nedeljko Altomanović attempted to assassinate princ Lazar. Princ Lazar was wounded, but God providence saved him from death, while his faithful followers and Žarko were killed.

Left his son Mrkša Žarković, which had only ten. He was growing up in a house of Dejanović's, his uncle's house. It should be noted that he grew up with his sister, her name was Jelena, daughter of Konstantin Dejanović. Jelena later becomes Byzantine Empress. She suffered the most dramatic days of the Byzantine Empire. She ended her life as a nun, under the monastery name Ipomonija. She has been included in saints, her holy relics, can be found in the Saint Patapija monastery over the ancient Greek city Korint.

Mrkša as a Serbian nobleman ruled parts of the former Serbian Empire, cities Valona, Berat, Kanina and Pirc, to the south of present Albania until his death in 1414. He was married to Ruđina (1391), daughter of Balša II. Empress Jelena, wife of Emperor Dušan Nemanjić, was to Ruđina born aunt, and Bulgarian Emperor Asen, was a born uncle to her. Mrkša and Ruđina had eight male children. Their youngest son was named Žarko.

Žarko came to Pivska area (Nedajno). Žarković's remain here to this day, resisting all temptations, keeping alive all traditions and memories and material evidence about their family. Also was saved a lot of documents, books, and even mace and sword which were belonged to Žarko I, a general of Emperor Dušan till the 1942. when occupying army revenging for patriotic feelings and actions of capable members of family, and partly because of historical value, took away or destroyed a good part of this treasure. We hope that it will again be found and that will adorn refurbished and new endowment of this Christian, aristocratic family with its priceless and beauty.
